Minute Make-Ups
By GABRIELLE

If you have changed your hairdo this fall (if you haven't you should) you must redesign your make-up. Your eyebrows need reshaping or new pencilled accents. Your rouge must be applied to complement your new hairdo.

Dear Santa,
I am a little girl 6 years old and just started school. I have a little twin sister, who looks just like me. My mother can't hardly tell us apart. I am writing to tell you what we would like for you to bring us. I am most going to ask for very much, because I understand the way and how hard things are for you. Please bring us a doll, doll stroller, and high chair. Please go to see the other little boys and girls.
Your friends,
Betty and Paul.

VARIETY
Question: Can you give us a simple rule for the use of the trouble some "due to"?
Answer: "Due to" should modify a noun and a verb. Do not use "due to" for "owing to" because of, on account of.
Wrong: "He failed (verb) due to lack of study." Right: "His failure (noun) was due to lack of study."
Wrong: "They were defeated (verb) due to poor generalship." Right: "Their defeat (noun) was due to poor generalship."
Right: "Their defeat (noun) was due to" sentences, substitute the words "attributed to." If the sentence makes sense, then "due to" is correct. For example: The delay was attributed to a washout. "Due to" is therefore, is incorrect. Right: The picnic was postponed because of (on account of) rain.
Question: Please give the meaning of the abbreviations: e. g., i. e., and etc.
Answer: In that order they stand for the Latin exempli gratia, "for example"; id est, "that is"; et cetera, "namely." "E. g." is not an abbreviation; it is the Latin for "thus," and it is used after a quoted word or phrase to indicate that the wording or spelling of the original has been followed exactly even if containing an error, as "Please ship me five (sic) dozen boxes of oranges."
Question: Is it permissible to use R. V. P. in a business letter?
Answer: No. The abbreviation (Responded, if you plan) means "Answer, if you please," and is proper only on formal invitations.

Girls, don't neglect your man in the service. Nothing keeps up the morale of soldiers and sailors more than do letters from home. Keep the letters cheerful and gay. Tell him all the "little" news you know. He'll be glad to hear about your garden, and what moves you have seen. Let him know that the things he enjoyed are still around to be shared when he returns. Tell him about the things your friends are doing, and the bridge you play with the girls. Don't tell him about the date you had with the handsome sergeant, because the thought of you out with another man will only deflate his ego. Don't mean and groan about rationing and shortages. He is giving more than you are no matter how hard pressed you may be.
